Friendships are not found in heaven, for heaven is the ultimate in moral perfection, and that is universal; friendship, however, is a special bond between particular persons; in this world only, therefore, it is a recourse for opening one's mind to the other and communing with him.

Immanuel Kant, Von der Freundschaft

Kant, Vorlesungen 4.1, AA 27.1, p. 428. pp. 422-424.
